Evaluating Development Effectiveness

TEI: THE EVALUATORS' INSTITUTE
CLAREMONT EVALUATION CENTER
 Claremont Graduate University

WEDNESDAY, JULY 11, 2018

5:30–6:30 p.m.: Reception | 6:30–8:00 p.m.: Panel Discussion

Development aid, a vital tool for promoting economic development and welfare, forms an important part of many governments' foreign relations strategy. In 2016, the aid reached a new peak of $142.6 billion, according to official data collected by the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development's (OECD's) Development Assistance Committee (DAC). Evaluation, as a tool that supports both accountability and learning, can be a key component in increasing the effectiveness of the development aid-funded programs. OECD/DAC defines development effectiveness as "the extent to which a given development intervention's objectives were achieved, or are expected to be achieved, taking into account their relative importance." This panel will bring together leaders in the evaluation function at Mercy Corps, the World Bank, and the United States Agency for International Development (USAID) to share their views on these questions:

- How is the evaluation of development and/or humanitarian response different from other types of evaluations?
- What are the key issues or trends in these types of evaluations today?
- What are lessons learned that funders, implementers, governments, beneficiaries, and evaluators need to know?
